LOIS M. PIPER WARSHIPS FOR MEXICO

VEILED WOMAN SOUGHT

The federal authorities today took action in the sensational case of Lois M. Piper, daughter of Vice-Chairman Kingsbury of the Maine Democratic State Committee, who was drugged, kidnapped and brought to Boston, held in captivity here for eight days, and then released only when the hunt for the girl made things "too hot" for the kidnappers.

Detour Attorney Whitcomb of Portland, Me., began work today on the case in Waterville, Me., where the girl was drugged. Simultaneously, United States District Attorney Ann F. French issued this statement:

"I have received no formal complaint as yet; neither have the facts been brought to my attention except through the newspapers. I am merely awaiting formal notice of the case to file the most rigorous investigation."

In the event of the guilty parties being found, I will prosecute them to the full extent of the law.

"It is the most unusual course for the Maine federal authorities to take the first action. The girl lives in Maine, and the alleged drugging and kidnapping occurred there. She is now at her father's in Portland, where the Maine authorities can easily find her."

"When they begin action, I shall co-operate with every man in my power. I shall leave nothing undone to find and compel the woman and the men responsible."

Frederick P. Schmidt, federal prosecutor under the Maine, while state act, was not to be found at his office here today, but it was stated in the building that Mr. Schmidt is now in Maine—presumably co-operating with District Attorney Whitehouse in an investigation of the case.

It was stated today that the question of the purpose of bringing the girl to Boston would have largely in view protection. The girl has said that while she was held captive in Boston men came to her room, but she drove them away.

Detour Attorney Whitehouse is planning to question the girl as soon as she is released.

BAR TURKEY, FEEL THANKFUL ON VEGETABLES

Members of the Millenium Guild, Boston vegetarian society, dined at the City-Place without a turkey. The menu, however, was much more costly than a thirty-seven-cent-a-pound turkey would have been.

Mrs. Lorraine Phillips brought to the banquet her two daughters, nine and twelve, who have never tasted meat. Another guest, Professor W. O. Crosby, a Technology professor of seventy-eight, has never eaten meat, and neither has his son, who is six feet six inches tall.

Lois Crutcher, Sidney Lander, the poet, and Emily Selinger, the artist, were other guests. Ella Wheeler Wilcox, who was unable to be present, sent a poem, "Morning Prayer," which was read.

Vegetables, fruits and nuts assembled in curious combinations set a mark in cooking art. Mushrooms, oysters, peas, corn, heart of the palm—plunged in and tasted like chicken—cranberry punch, golden rule toast and open house delicacies were some of the dishes.

Served in round cups, oysters bordered proved something new to numerous guests. While these cups are much like mushroom, the guests are not. That is the extent to which they were enlightened, except that everyone agreed they are not animal.

Many of the diners read poems or spoke on vegetarianism.

Poem Sent by Ella Wheeler Wilcox to Turkeyless Dinner

MORNING PRAYER.

Let me today do something that shall take
A little sadness from the world's vast store;
And may I be so favored as to make
Of joy's too scanty sum a little more.
Let me not hurt, by any selfish deed
Or thoughtless word, the heart of foe or friend;
Nor would I pass, unseeing, worthy need,
Or sin by silence when I should defend.
However meagre be my worldly wealth,
Let me give something that shall aid my kind—
A word of courage, or a thought of health,
Dropped as I pass for troubled hearts to find.
Let me tonight look back across the span
Of years that have been, and to my conscience say—
Because of some good act to boast or man,
"The world is better that I lived today."

SAYRES LEAVE WASHINGTON TO SAIL TOMORROW

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—Mr. and Mrs. Francis B. Sayre, after spending a greater part of Thanksgiving day at the White House in the Wilson family circle, left today for New York by President Wilson, who was on route for the Army-Navy game.

The newly married couple will not see the football match, however, as they will be on their way to Europe several hours before the game begins, bidding adieu to their family at the wharf. They will return home until late in January.

The secret as to where they went to spend the first few days of their honeymoon is still a mystery. Their appearance in Baltimore, Md., gave credit to the rumor that they were guests at a country mansion near that city.

Both the Garretts and the McKays, of the Green Spring Valley are close friends of the Wilsons, and it was thought that they might have stopped at the latter home. This was denied, however, as then it was found that the house of Mr. Harrison Garrett, at Riverport, had been thrown open to them, while Mrs. Garrett was spending several days in Philadelphia.

The secret was let out by a former Concord College girl friend of the bride.

Brookline society girls, clad in evening gowns and hats, hurried from Thanksgiving functions to supplement the care of their horses, early today, following a $1,000 fire in the Brookline Riding Academy at Morse avenue and Walnut street, Brookline, during which fifty fine ribbon animals were rescued.

The fire was attended by Mrs. Walter, owner of Lady Bonfield, one of the horses saved, and after seeing her pet had been cared for returned to her home in an automobile. She was followed by several others.

Flames and smoke blocked the usual roadway in the street and the polished stock were thrashed with confusion, but Night Watchman P. J. Ryan, assisted by policemen, firemen and others, herded the horses into the basement and led them to safety into Junior street.

The fire is believed to have started from some unknown cause in a storeroom of Mrs. Leonard Wilbur, adjoining the riding academy. It swept through the academy, a one-story structure, and destroyed several dwelling houses in Morse avenue and Junior street, causing excitement among the spectators.

BOSTON AMERICAN

80 AND 82 SUMMER ST., BOSTON, NOVEMBER 28, 1913.

The AMERICAN Asks Mr. Fitzgerald to Stand for Mayor Again Because Boston Needs Him

Once more the AMERICAN asks Mayor Fitzgerald to undertake the duties of Mayor for another term.

Boston has given Mr. Fitzgerald much.

She has almost always responded to his pleas for honor and responsibility.

BY HER GENEROSITY TO HIM SHE HAS GIVEN HIM THAT EXPERIENCE IN HER PUBLIC AFFAIRS WHICH SHE NOW NEEDS AND WISHES TO TURN TO HER OWN ADVANTAGE.

It would be but a just requirement for all her favors if the Mayor undertook, even at considerable sacrifice of inclination and personal comfort, to administer the affairs of Boston for another term.

This is no time for a merely passive chief magistrate.

It is no time for a new man loaded down with promises and burdened with the political necessity of readjusting a machinery of administration which is working well and needs no tinkering.

It is far better to have a man who occasionally does something that somebody opposes, because he is doing something all the time, than a man who does nothing that anybody opposes, because he does nothing at all.

It would be a great loss to the city if she had to witness, without good cause, a new administration devoted to a scramble of the outs to get in and the ins to stay.

The candidacy of any man based upon the proposition that we need a new deal merely because it will appeal to those who have not received all they demanded from the present administration bodes no good to the city.

The affairs of the city today are now adjusted. The heads of departments are under way with their work. They have been chosen under the Civil Service law and are as efficient as any new administration could hope to make them. The city employees are contented and efficient and in the Mayor we have a chief magistrate of unequalled experience in the office and of the peculiar temperament and resourcefulness which Boston needs most at this period of reawakened enterprise.

We have said before, and we repeat it, for it is important, that the Mayor first promulgated the idea in this community that we could promote our municipal prosperity by organized public spirit; that the city, taken as a whole, is only a larger unit of any business enterprise contained in it and that we should seek an increase of business as a city just as an individual would seek it for his private concern.

This theory the Mayor has put into practice.

He has been a "LIVE WIRE" connecting all our public and quasi-public activities during four years.

No cause, however small, which might promote some municipal interest has called upon him for participation in vain.

The business men of the city have come to recognize the advantages to the city of Mayor Fitzgerald's temperament and activity.

It is becoming more evident every day that the business men see the folly of putting in a new man who will either be merely passive, allowing the departments to run themselves, or too active, inaugurating a riot of change and confusion in which somebody else will lose what anybody gains, and will degrade the chief magistrate to a dispenser of the spoils of office.

WE ASK MR. FITZGERALD TO STAND FOR MAYOR AGAIN BECAUSE BOSTON NEEDS HIM.

To those citizens who are inclined to suggest that the Mayor has had the office long enough and that now it is somebody's else turn, we reply that the Mayor's office is nobody's job; that the public offices were created for the public service and NOT as jobs for anybody; that the man who can serve best ought to be continued and that his experience in office makes a stronger rather than a weaker reason for retaining him.

We elect a man the Mayor of Boston to do our work for us, NOT to give him ten thousand dollars a year, NOT to give him the honor of the office NOR its power.

THESE are simply the attractions with which we furnish the office to make men accept its burdens.

There is no such thing as "hogging" a public office. Nobody has the right to a "turn at the job" unless he can show superior qualifications.

The theory of frequent elections and rotation in office was not to give somebody else "A TURN," but to give an opportunity to put out of office a man who has proved incompetent.

Our city government is a vast business organization. The same principle applies to those who conduct it as to those who conduct a private business enterprise.

Who would think of telling a great business house that its manager had held his "job" for a long time and ought not to hop it any longer, but ought to give somebody else a chance?

Come, Mr. Mayor, you have received the encore; come out and acknowledge it.

Return to the people of Boston a LITTLE of the favor they have shown you.

From a Former President of the Boston Chamber of Commerce

Boston, November 24, 1913.

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

The group of men identified with the Chamber of Commerce, who were active in the campaign of last week, with the sole purpose of maintaining the impartial attitude of the Chamber in all matters of public concern, desire me to express to you their appreciation of the most valuable assistance rendered by the AMERICAN in the furtherance of this cause.

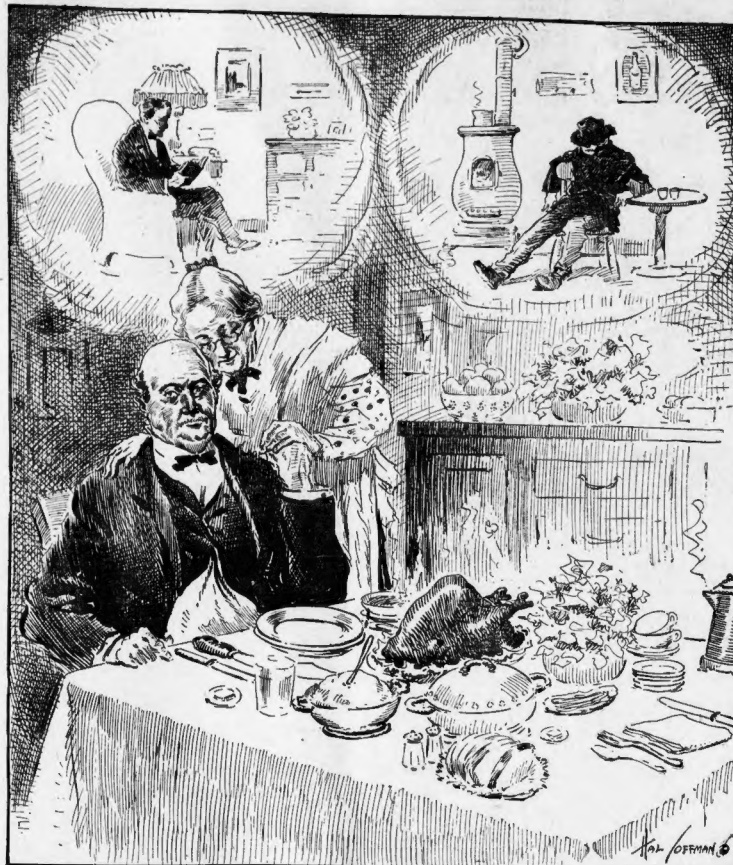

Your news article of Wednesday showed a thorough understanding of the situation and the affiliation of those behind the mis-called "Independent" movement, while your editorial of the same date was distinctly stimulating and aroused many of our members to a sense of the issues which were involved and their individual obligation to hold the Chamber fast in the line which has secured for it universal confidence throughout the entire community.

Again thanking you and the AMERICAN for your timely and efficient help, I remain,

Yours very truly,

BERNARD J. ROTHWELL.

Thanksgiving Dinner---Back Home

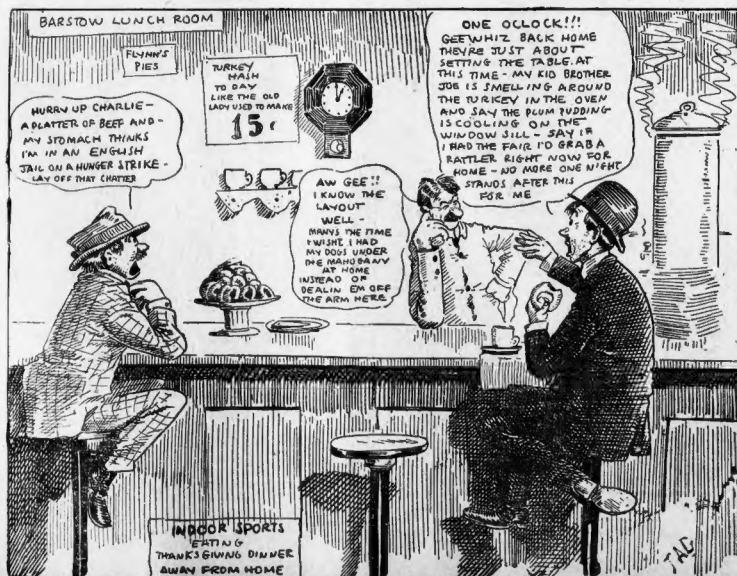

REMEMBER the day you kissed them good-by.
And, with jaw clenched tight and a tear in your eye,
You left them at home, while out you strode
To join in the press of the crowded road?
What of the life you have lived since then—
Are you a man in the world of men?
Have you given them cause for rejoicing, say,
When the old folks think of their boy today?

You may have won in the world of strife;
You may have wasted your hours of life;
You may have walked in the path that's strife;
You may have invited your evil fate;
You may have honor; you may have shame;
Regard or obloquy, praise or blame;
But remember, however has run your way,
The old folks think of their boy today.

You have won success? Is your record clear—
Have you done nothing shady, unkind or mean?
In your book of life write down no deed
For which you would blush should the old folks read.
You have failed? You have erred? You are pushed to the wall?
It's a chicken-heart quite for a bit of a fall.
Reck up; go at it again and, say,
The old folks will brag of their boy some day.

Hearst Raps Wilson on R. R. Situation

Says Administration Is Not Likely to Help New England and Is Doing Best as Appreciation for Railroad Support

When Mr. Hearst was in Boston last week to see the Harvard-Yale game the Boston Post sought an interview with him. He had too many engagements at the time but prepared the following statement which was mailed from New York and printed in the Post of yesterday.

Editor Boston Post:

"I want to say a word of congratulation to the Post on the interview with Mr. Mellen that it printed on November 9. The printing of such an article is a great public service. It is an authoritative exposition of the evils and abuses of railroad monopoly.

"It definitely fixes the fault of the mismanagement of the New York & New Haven Railroad. It locates the blame for the deterioration of the property, the deaths of many unfortunate passengers and the damage to business interests of New England, upon the actually responsible individuals—the great speculative bankers of Wall street.

"These men have no concern for New England, or for the citizens of New England, no concern for the business interests of New England, for the welfare of the railroad property or the safety of the railroad's passengers, as long as they themselves can secure their speculative profits.

"The action of these speculative bankers in interfering with the development of a great and important section of this country, in restricting the creation of wealth in that section, in hampering the transportation, in destroying the property and murdering the citizens of that section, is essentially criminal.

"The individuals responsible for such conditions should be regarded as criminals.

"Politicians who condone such criminality, merely because of the wealth and political influence of the responsible individuals, are nothing less than accessories after the fact.

"Attorney-General McReynolds has the New York & New Haven Railroad situation before him for action, or rather, it would appear, for inaction.

"It remains to be seen whether the special railroad representative of a railroad administration will proceed against the individuals clearly shown to be responsible in the Mellen interview. Personally, I doubt if anything will be done to the dissatisfaction of any railroad interest by the Wilson administration.

"The Wilson presidential boom was conceived in the veto of the railroad safety crossing bill by Mr. Wilson when he was Governor of New Jersey.

"During the time that elapsed between Governor Wilson's veto of this railroad safety crossing bill and the re-passing and the signing of the bill by the administration that succeeded him, 70 people were killed and 92 mutilated—a fact which indicates both the sincerity of Mr. Wilson's devotion to the railroads and the intensity of his ambition to be President.

"The Wilson boom was definitely delivered at the Baltimore convention, where the largest number of railroad lobbyists ever assembled was led to a Wilson victory under the leadership of Mitchell Palmer, attorney for the Pennsylvania Railroad.

"Since the election of Mr. Wilson, the Wilson administration has done its best to show its appreciation of the railroad support which elected it.

"It permitted the reorganization of the Union and Southern Pacific in harmony with the desires of these railroads and in opposition to the interests of the States affected, although President Taft had prevented this unjust reorganization and the State of California had attempted to enjoin it.

"Again, when the States of Minnesota and Wisconsin were attempting to compel the railroads to do their duty to the citizens of those States, and were employing the powers of their State Railroad Commissions to this end, the Wilson administration appeared before the Supreme Court of the United States, in an attempt to deny such power to the Railroad Commissions of those States.

"The United States Supreme Court overruled the specious federalistic plea of the Attorney-General of the United States and sustained the States of Minnesota and Wisconsin. The Attorney-General of the United States accomplished nothing other than further to establish the sympathy of the administration at Washington with railroad abuses and oppression.

"The administration at Washington has been in favor of compelling the coastwise shipping of the United States to pay tolls through the Panama Canal, for the simple reason that the coast shipping will be the main competitor of the transcontinental railroads, and whatever canal toll shall be added to the cost of transportation from one coast to the other of the United States can be added and will be added to the cost of transportation by the transcontinental railroads.

"Undoubtedly, if the railroads can secure a canal toll on the intercoast shipping they can impose the same additional charge on the intercoast railway transportation and recoup themselves for expenses involved in electing the present Democratic administration.

"Under these circumstances, New England can hardly depend much upon the administration at Washington for the solution of any problem in which a railroad is involved. The New York & New Haven railway problem will therefore doubtless have to be solved by such honest and public spirited local statesmen as have not been bought up, and cannot be bought up, by the speculative bankers who control the New York & New Haven monopoly.

"The Mellen interview in the Post will supply valuable material to all honest and courageous public servants, and, more than that, it will enlighten the public as to the true condition of affairs in the management of that wrecked and wrecking railroad. It will inform the public as to the true causes for these conditions, and as to the individuals directly responsible for these causes.

"The events which follow that interview will do more still. They will enlighten the public as to which of their representatives, in high or low public office, are in collusion with the New York & New Haven Railroad and its speculative sponsors in Wall street, in their criminal purposes and practices.

"Very sincerely,
"WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST."
